ABSTRACT

This handbook, the first of two levels, is designed to help teachers refine and expand their language skills in spoken Cantonese. The handbook is written in spoken Cantonese form, which means that many Chinese characters are included that represent Cantonese expressions not found in standard written Chinese. The handbook is divided into 15 units, each containing pattern drills, practice of common terms and expressions, and conversations. The contents include vocabulary items and dialogues useful in a school setting; the principal topics are names, the school building, classroom items, directions, colors, the playground, parent-teacher conferences, and Parts of the body. An outline of Cantonese phonetic symbols is provided. The appendix includes a list of classifiers, a list of the titles of school staff and officials, and a sample progress report for evaluating individual students. (CLK)

This handbook is written primarily for teachers to help them to refine and expand their language skills in Cantonese. The handbook is written in spoken Cantonese form which means the inclusion of many Chinese characters which represent Cantonese expressions which are not found in the standard Chinese written form. The romanization of the Chinese words in this publication is adapted from the Gordon Lew system. It should be kept in mind that romanization can only give an approximation as to the tone of a Chinese word. The actual tone can only be determined by knowing the Chinese word in its original form.

The contents of the handbook include vocabulary items and dialogues which would be useful in a school setting; e.g., the various titles of school staff members, the names of common classroom items, items on the Parent/Teacher Conference Form, and common expressions used in the classroom and around the school.

The handbook is divided into two levels with 15 units each. Each unit includes pattern drills, common terms and expressions, and conversations.

This handbook has been made possible with the aid of Mr. Gordon Lew, Mr. Victor Low, Mr. Roger Tom, and the staff of the Chinese Bilingual Pilot Program, ESEA Title VII, San Francisco.
